- ▲ Conveniently connected with downtown Taipei by multiple public transportation services in Banqiao: railway, MRT, high speed railway, and dozens of bus lines
- ▲ Ten minutes from NTUA to Banqiao Train/MRT/HSR/Bus stations by taxi
- ▲ About 60 minutes from Banqiao Bus station to Taoyuan International Airport

NTUA

NTUA was founded on Oct. 31, 1955, as the National Taiwan School of Arts. In 1960, it was re-named as the National Taiwan Academy of Arts, and then the National Taiwan College of Arts in 1994. The institution took on its present name on August 1, 2001. With its long history and specialized disciplines, NTUA virtually holds the key position in arts education of Taiwan.

Education at our institution emphasizes humanistic thinking, creative production, theoretical analysis and hands-on practice. In terms of scope, education includes the local and the international, the avant garde and the traditional, the creative and the commercial, and the theoretical and the practical.

Our Exhibition

NTUA has plenty exhibition venues. The campus itself acts as art exhibition space, as sculptures and exquisitely designed garden scenery can be found wherever you go. The university's art museum is a venue for permanent and special art exhibitions. Other exhibition spaces include the International Exhibition Hall, Dahan Gallery, Dagan Gallery, Zhenshanmei Gallery, and Xinxiang Gallery, and the gallery space in the Department of Fine Arts. The exhibition of diverse art works on campus greatly enhances student opportunities to study and appreciate art.

Our Art Industry

NTUA promotes the art industry through extensive cooperation with industry. It has established a unique Cultural and Creative Industry Park, which houses many related businesses and Artists-in-Residence. With this strategy and facility the university is able to provide students with workshop space to learn about and create art works which involve sculpture, glass works, metal works, lacquer works, and multimedia production. The NTUA Gallery also provides an internship mechanism for art industry operation and management.

Our Performance

To strive toward professional standards of teaching and learning in performance arts, NTUA combines academic fields with the market function of the art industry. Students from the Departments of Dance, Music, Chinese Music, and Drama participate in officially established performance groups such as the Dagan Dance Troupe, the Dagan Orchestra, the Dagan Chinese Music Group, and the Dagan Theatre Group. The university's well-equipped performance halls also provide these groups with the best possible performance venues.

The background of the slide is a collage of three distinct images. The top-left portion shows a soft-focus landscape with a body of water and a shoreline under a pale sky. The top-right and middle-right portions feature a dark, textured wooden surface. The bottom-right portion shows a white, geometric sculpture with a black cube-like element, set against a light, textured background.

The College of Fine Arts embraces both tradition and innovation. Students study art theory from both the East and the West, and value local characteristics while developing global views. The college strives to make use of technology, to incorporate international information, and to encourage students to create an original style. The college actively recruits outstanding teachers with specialized and rich work experience to join our faculty. The College of Fine Arts is a strong supporter of the creative and cultural industries.

Academic exchange and international academic seminars are strongly encouraged. Each department regularly holds school anniversary art exhibitions, teacher and student art exhibitions, academic seminars and international academic panels. Our college also organizes a series of master academic lectures for prominent guests. We also hold large foundation and entrepreneur commissioned competitions.

The College of Fine Arts has four departments: Fine Arts, Painting and Calligraphy Arts, Sculpture, and Architecture Art Conservation, offering bachelor's, master's, and doctoral programs of study.

The College of Design of NTUA was officially founded as our school system was reformed on the 1st of August 2001. From then on, the College of Design has become one of the five official colleges of NTUA.

At present, our college includes three departments for both undergraduate and graduate programs, which are the Department of Visual Communication Design, the Department of Crafts and Design, and the Department of Multimedia and Animation Arts, and a Graduate School of Creative Industry Design which offers doctoral degree program.

Our college is the only one among universities of arts in Taiwan combining the practice-model and the research-model features with a complete educational system for arts and design.

The academic excellence of our college has attracted some of the best teachers and students around the world to learn and research together. Additionally, we strive to connect and reinforce the exchanges between academic, research, industrial fields as well as policies, accumulating the accomplishment of teaching and research of a variety of disciplines, such as fine arts, design, science, management, information technology, etc. Thus, our college has gained a solid foundation for interdisciplinary and integrative studies.

Our college keeps the principles that teaching and researching should be regarded as equally important and that we should help students develop their virtue in order to cohere to our university's motto "Truth, Goodness, and Beauty." With our long traditions and professions in the fine arts field, keeping the concept of "humanity-centeredness for the base, humanities for the body of concept, and creativity for the application of expressions," we aim to train our students to become professional designers who possess humanity, sense, and sensibility.

COLLEGE OF COMMUNICATIONS

Tel: +886-2-22722181 ext.5001
 Fax: +886-2-89697522
 E-Mail: com@ntua.edu.tw

The College of Communications is a combination of arts, communication media and technology. Compared with the other communications colleges in other universities in Taiwan, our college emphasizes artistic expression in course content, and integrates other facets of society such as humanism and information.

There are three departments in the college of communications: Graphic Communication Arts, Radio and Television, and Motion Picture. Technology and art is directly combined in our college. Motion picture, printing, photography, and television programming are all art creations founded on a good command of technological tools. The establishment of the graduate school of Applied Media Arts was the direct fruit of such an approach, as it became the first graduate program in Taiwan to combine art aesthetics and the production of motion pictures and television programs. The Doctor of Philosophy in Creative Video and Digital Media Industries was established in 2017, with an aim to nurture high-level talents in the field of international communications.

Students are educated in small groups. We particularly emphasize interaction between teachers and students and stress the importance of maintaining a free and open study culture.

 E-Mail: pfa@ntua.edu.tw

In accordance with the university charter, five colleges were established when this institution officially became a university on August 1, 2001. The College of Performing Arts consists of Department of Drama (including the Master of Performing Arts, formerly known as the Institute of Performing Arts), Department of Music, Department of Chinese Music, Department of Dance and Ph.D. Program of Performing Arts. This makes our college the most complete college of performing arts in Taiwan.

Our college is committed to staying at the forefront of performance art research in the 21st Century, and to making the college a performing arts center in Taiwan. The curriculum in the College of Performing Arts is a combination of both the theoretical and practical. The departments encourage interaction between the rural areas in the country, and organize various activities and events in the countryside. In addition to the practical realities of performance, academic research and theoretical education make up a major part of education in our college.

COLLEGE OF HUMANITIES

Tel: +886-2-22722181 ext.2402
 Fax: +886-2-89697520
 E-Mail: hc@ntua.edu.tw

The College of Humanities cultivates art workers and researchers with global views and humanistic values. Such a focus will promote international-local communication and integrate professional art education and multiculturalism.

Education in the College of Humanities aims to combine art education, the latest information trends, and daily life aesthetics, while maintaining a balance between local and international humanities and art education.

The college has three graduate institutes and three educational centers: Graduate School of Arts Management and Cultural Policy, Graduate School of Arts and Humanities Instruction, Overseas In-service Master's Program of Cross-disciplinary Arts in Macau, General Educational Center, Teacher Education Center, Research Center of Chinese Arts. It acts as an integrated platform for artistic creation and research, and supplies teaching resources to the four professional art colleges. Theory courses emphasize both qualitative and quantitative research which helps bridge the gap between the practice of art and art theory.

Overseas In-service Master's Program of Cross-disciplinary Arts in Macau

In our integrative art education, music education and performing arts education, our curriculum adopts visual, auditory and kinesthetic instructions to achieve theoretical constructs and educational goals such as the exploration, expression, appreciation, understanding, practice as well as application of arts and humanities.

Research Center of Chinese Arts

Established in 2014, the Research Center of Chinese Arts responds the needs of promoting Taiwan studies at the international level. This center aims to bring the local culture closer to the world. It helps international scholars carry out research in Taiwan. In addition, it holds seminars, lectures, and exhibitions to provide people with a profound introduction of Chinese and Taiwanese art works as well as art history.
